Favorite dance-pop queen: Madonna or Kylie Minogue?

Madonna and Kylie Minogue are among the most beloved dance-pop queens to ever bless us with music. After Madonna blew up with "Like A Virgin" in 1984, Kylie scored an international hit with "The Loco-Motion" in 1988. Kylie didn't really have another dance hit in the U.S. until the "Can't Get You Out of My Head" in 2001. While Kylie is huge internationally, Madonna is revered globally as the Queen of Pop, being one of the best-selling artists of all time.

Madonna is known for being a pop blueprint artist. She pushed the envelope since the '80s with her sexuality and girl power. The Queen of Pop is known as the Queen of Re-Invention, changing up her sound and image with each era of music. Kylie Minogue rose to prominence after Madonna and often has been compared to the Queen of Pop—in terms of style, image, sound and reinvention.

Watch the music video to "Hung Up" below—from Madonna's "Confessions on a Dance Floor" album, which is one of her most re-inventive eras.

Madonna is reportedly a fan of Kylie Minogue. The Queen of Pop has even performed Kylie's "Can't Get You Out of My Head" in concert. The chart-topping dance hit is definitely one of Kylie's signature hits and was a mega comeback for the Australian pop star in the U.S. in 2001. Kylie is revered as a gay icon these days, for her many dance bops, and exploration into pop and dance sub-genres.
